| The South African Dilemma

In South Africa, there is a growing problem of youth unemployment, which is exacerbated by a lack of business skills among young people. Many of them lack access to critical resources such as faculty, land, finance, and other resources, which makes it difficult for them to start and grow their own businesses.

Furthermore, there is a shortage of innovation and creativity, which is essential for creating new opportunities and driving economic growth. To address these challenges, there is a need for coaching and mentorship programs that can help young people develop the skills and knowledge they need to succeed in business.
